Art Unit: 1761

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Wesdorp et al.

Wesdorp et al disclose an edible plastic dispersion. The dispersion comprises a gel, water and a fat. The gelling agents used to form the gel can be pectins, carrageenan, xanthan gum and microcrystalline cellulose. The dispersion can suitably be used in products such as cheese, nut or vegetable spread or other food products to reduce the fat content thereof. (see columns 5-6 and col. 8)

Wesdorp et al disclose the gelling materials used can be pectins, carrageenan, xanthan gum and microcrystalline cellulose. All these materials provide dietary fiber; thus, the gel formed is a dietary fiber gel. Fat is a lipid. The dispersion comprises the gel, water and the fat; thus, it is the same as the emulsified liquid shortening composition even though such term is not used in the reference. Wesdorp do not disclose the amount of solid as claimed.

Wesdorp et al disclose the dispersion is used in food products to reduce the fat content; the amounts of solid varies depending on the amount of dispersion used in the food products and it would have been obvious to vary the amount of dispersion used depending on the fat content desiring to reduce. Wesdorp et al disclose the dispersion is used in cheese and spread; thus, it would have been obvious to use the dispersion in processed cheese and processed cheese spread when one wants to reduce the fat content of these product.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Zolper and Hoefler et al disclose fat substitutes containing fiber gel.

Luzio et al disclose food compositions containing gel.
